The program offers advice on how a woman can stay balanced while looking for a man. In a cute and spirited reading, the author pitches her conviction that the care of a woman's soul ought to be the work of God, not the buff guy she thinks she wants in her life. Like the best programs on romantic relationships, she pushes personal integrity, self responsibility, and a healthy skepticism about all that glitters in a relationship. There are a lot of biblical stories in this program, but they won't overwhelm the secular listener because the narrative has a street-smart, beauty-parlor familiarity that's just plain fun to hear. The sheer emotionality of the presentation is worth the price of admission; there's nothing here not to like. T.W. © AudioFile 2001, Portland, Maine-- Copyright © AudioFile, Portland, Maine
